First Lady-Well, did you go to Macy's last week? Second Lady-Yes, I did. First Lady—Why, I thought you belonged to a society that cassed a resolution that they would never go there again and I thought your hoaband said he would get a divorce from you if you ever went by the door even.

Second Lady.—Well, so we did, but I couldn't help it I read Macy's advertisement last week aloud at the breakfast table, and there were six other ladies who he resolved never to go there again, who heard me a nounce my resolution to return to Macy's. I never miss anything so much in my life. All the little choice at ticles that I had been accustomed to get there I was corpletely out of, and I could not find them elsewhere, exce at extravagant prices, and many of them not at all. Fin ing that I was determined to go, four of them loaded in down with commissions for themselves, and I judg from the amount and variety of those commission that they had suffered as much as I had by slayir away. Well, I went to Macy's. Strange to say, the sto stood in the very same spot that it did before. It was it same pleasant store, brightened up with a fresh coat cannot are for the coming season; the same pleasant faces behind the counter that I have seen there so often, and felt at home in a minute.

Second Lady—Yes, it is true, for I bought some of each and when I went home, and displayed my purchases to my rix friends, they instantly returned to their old belief, that Macy's was the right place, after all, and the next forenoon we all went there shopping in a merry crowd together. Such is the popu ar verdict for Macy.
